LA SANITATION AND ENVIRONMENT
SOLID RESOURCES CITYWIDE RECYCLING DIVISION

The Solid Resources Citywide Recycling Division (SRCRD) was established by the Department of Public Works, Bureau of Sanitation, to develop and implement source reduction, recycling and composting programs throughout the City, outside of the single-family curbside recycling program. The division provides technical assistance, fosters public-private recycling partnerships, monitors the AB939 program, manages the collection/disposal programs for Household Hazardous Waste/Used Oil, and creates markets for recyclable materials. To help Los Angeles residents, businesses and institutions, SRCRD has produced a variety of “how to” guides that provide information on waste reduction, reuse, recycling and composting resources.

USING THIS GUIDE

This guide lists many reuse and recycling options for construction and demolition material and is a planning resource for contractors, construction companies, architects, and homeowners.

Companies in this guide are grouped by material type (i.e. asphalt, brick/masonry, C&D debris, cardboard, carpet, ceiling tiles, concrete, dirt, drywall/gypsum, glass, green waste, lumber, metal, mixed inerts, non-structural elements, rock/gravel, roofing materials, and structural elements). Always call the company before taking material there. They may have requirements for the material that is accepted.

Recyclers

Most of the facilities in this guide are recyclers. They take source-separated material for recycling. Their recycling rate is essentially 100%. Examples of recyclers include companies that take wood for processing into mulch, clean asphalt and concrete for grinding into road base, clean asphalt for recycling into asphalt, or metal to be shipped to foundries.

Sorting material at the job site for delivery to a recycler can save money. Some material such as metal can be sold if it is separated from other waste. For other separated materials, a recycler will typically charge less than the landfill to dump the material. In addition, waste haulers that handle source-separated materials are not charged a waste hauling permit fee by the City for that material, which can also reduce costs.

Certified Construction and Demolition (C&D) Debris Processors

These facilities take in mixed C&D debris for sorting and processing. The recyclable materials resulting from this are sent out to recyclers and end users, and the remainder is disposed of at a landfill.

These facilities have recycling rates that have been certified by the City of Los Angeles in the voluntary Certified Processor program. The list of Certified Processors is in this guide. If a Certified Processor handles more than one type of waste, the mixed C&D material must be taken to the appropriate C&D processing area. In addition, the weight ticket or receipt must also reflect the right information. For the most up-to-date list of certified processors and their most current recycling rates, please visit www.lacitysan.org/haulerpermit

Inert Debris Engineered Fill Operations

Inert Debris Engineered Fill Operations (IDEFOs) may be used for the diversion of inert materials including glass, brick, dirt, concrete, rock, asphalt, and similar materials; however, mixed inerts taken to an IDEFO is not counted as diversion nor disposal. IDEFOs do not accept green waste, wood, cardboard, or household waste. IDEFOs are typically old mines or quarries that are being refilled, or canyons and gullies that are being filled. Examples of IDEFOs include Azusa Land Reclamation, Peck Road Gravel Pit, and Sun Valley Landfill.

STRATEGIES TO MINIMIZE WASTE

Reduce

Planning can help minimize the amount of scrap material that is generated at a job site. Whenever possible, design the dimensions of the construction project to use standard sized materials. Make very precise material estimates and measurements to minimize on-site waste. Consider using engineered wood products, metal framing, and pre-manufactured components. Plan landscaping designs around slow growth plants to minimize trimming waste.

Reuse

Consider using deconstruction instead of traditional demolition methods. Deconstruction is the careful disassembly of a structure. It produces more material that can be separated and reused. For instance, asphalt and concrete can be crushed on site and used as the base for a parking lot. Doors, light fixtures, architectural wood work, bricks, appliances and cabinets can sometimes be removed from a building, stored on site and reused in the new structure. Pallets can be reused on site or sent to a pallet recycler. Reusable material can be donated to a local charity or taken to salvage companies. Always call the organization first.

Recycle

Use the companies listed in this brochure to maximize C&D debris recycling for your next project. Properly planned construction and deconstruction can result in more source-separated material with a much higher reuse or recycling value than mixed debris. When comparing the cost of different options, be sure to factor in all the costs of each method to get your true cost. Most of the time, even if you have to pay to recycle a material, it will still cost less than landfill disposal.
